Trauma care starts when first responders arrive on the scene

"Trauma care doesn't really start when the patient hits the door here at DHR Health. It starts when emergency medical services – the pre-hospital providers like EMTs, paramedics, fire departments, police officers – arrive at the scene," says Dr. Jeffrey Skubic, Trauma Medical Director with DHR Health. Read more about why Dr. Skubic believes communication is critical to his trauma teams and why DHR Health is on FirstNet.

RESPONDER HEALTH & WELLNESS

Making mindfulness a part of your everyday operations

"Responders have a direct line to what is happening in the community. We don't get the call because people are having a great time. And we witness the worst of human experience," says Rhonda Kelly, Executive Director of the All Clear Foundation. Read more about why it's important for first responders to practice mindfulness and focus on what matters. And learn about the tools and resources designed specifically for them.
